

RITE NOW @ ROP

The fortieth day of school at Southwest Leadership Academy called for a celebration so after five hours of academics, students enjoyed a host of fun activities. Teachers and school administrators supervised the games, the food, and the ice cream. With the help of SLA's IT director and DJ, Oscar Rios, students rocked to the music while they played shooting star basketball, kickball, bocce' ball and musical chairs.

Reliving some of their younger fun events, SLA's high school students totally enjoyed competing with the inflated hungry hippo, and the bungee run 2 lane relay races.

Chef Yo provided a great barbeque meal and students were also able to relax and play Monitor Uno, Jenga or Heads Up with teachers Chuck Connor and Stacey Wheeler. It was a fun afternoon for everyone and celebrated successfully completing more than 20% of the school year. Many students are attending school in person and many are still working remotely but Southwest Leadership is able to deliver instruction synchronously to both groups with the new boxlight boards it has purchased and the additional professional development teachers received to modify their instructional strategies.

At Southwest Leadership Academy, students play hard and work hard and there is no better place to learn and grow.
