

RITE NOW @ ROP

There are plenty of fun times at Southwest Leadership Academy in Phoenix. Michelle Harris, the school's guidance counselor, ensures that students experience spirit weeks and spirit days from crazy hats, to crazy socks, and mismatched clothing which our high school students enjoy.

There was PJ day when students can don their favorite but discreet pajamas. Even the administrators get into the fun when their favorite sports teams win or lose and they have to pay the price for rooting for the wrong team as evidenced by Dr. Greg Fowler whose team lost to the Bears forcing him to wear the Bears garb for the day.

There are Halloween at Southwest Leadership Academy can be scary and fun. Students and staff are encouraged to dress up for Halloween to bring some spirit to the school and many folks go all out.

Students dressed in exotic costumes, science teacher, Jon Walker, as Uncle Fester lighting up his class, zombies and students from Hogwarts all prowling the hallways throughout the day.

Students at SLA have a good time but also are focused on their academic performance. More students passed all or part of the Arizona state exam this year than ever before but still have time for sports, spirit and fun.
